Course content

Political power increasingly rests with organizations for global and regional governance, such as the United Nations (UN), the World Trade Organization (WTO), and the European Union (EU). This course explores the sources, forms, and consequences of global and regional governance in world politics. It provides an introduction to contending theories in the study of global and regional governance, and explains how these theories generate alternative interpretations of the relationship between power, efficiency, and legitimacy in global and regional governance. The course problematizes the relationship between states, international organizations, and nongovernmental organizations, as well as the interface between law and politics. Thematically, the course addresses governance in the areas of trade, development, production, security, human rights, the environment, and regional integration.

Learning outcomes

Upon completion of the course, students are expected to be able to:

1. Knowledge and Understanding:

- Explain the main contending theories in the study of global and regional governance.
- Describe the post-world war development of growing institutionalization in world politics.

2. Skills and Abilities:

- Analyze and critique the central debates concerning the establishment, design, effectiveness, role of non-state actors and legitimacy of global and regional governance.

3. Evaluation and Approach:

- Critically evaluate the central debates concerning the establishment design, effectiveness, role of non-state actors and legitimacy of global and regional governance.

Education

The course is organized as a series of seminars, involving student presentations and class discussions, as well as reflection papers and a concluding course paper. The seminars are compulsory. Information about how absences may be compensated will be distributed at the beginning of the course.

Forms of examination

Seminars are compulsory. The grading of the students' performance in the course will be based on (a) active and constructive participation in the seminars, (b) seminar presentations, (c) reflection papers and (c) a course paper.

For the grading, the course will employ a scale of seven steps, where A, B, C, D and E signify multiple degrees of pass, and F and Fx signify two degrees of fail. The grading criteria will be distributed at the beginning of the course. It may be possible for a student to supplement the examination task if the grade is Fx and if information about this possibility is included in the supervising description of the course. In such cases the complementary work must be submitted within a week from when the examining teacher has informed the student about the task. If the complementary task is accepted and has the character of supplementing a lack of understanding, a minor misunderstanding, minor errors, or too limited discussions for some part, the grade E will be applied. If the complementary task is accepted and has the character of correcting simple formal errors the grades A-E will be applied. A student that has received a passing grade may not take part in a re-examination in order to obtain a higher grade. Students who have failed the course twice have the right to request another examiner. This request should be addressed to the departmental unit that has appointed the examiner.

Interim

When the course is no longer offered or when its content has been significantly modified, the student has the right to be examined according to this syllabus once each semester during a period of three semesters

Misc

The language of instruction is English
